

- Three wooden Pinard obstetric stethoscopes, circa 1900-1930 -

Pinard-type obstetric stethoscopes in turned wood, with a flared bell and a wide flat base pierced by a small central hole. Two are blackened, the worn paint revealing the pale wood; the third is in natural, patinated wood. The shafts differ in profile (hourglass-shaped or conical), one with a turned collar. Instrument for listening to the fetal heartbeat.
